LOBO

www.lobo.de

On New Year's Eve, LOBO launched the world's largest display laser installation. Shortly before the turn of the year, a huge laser projection appeared on the monumental facade of the Anayasa tower. At the same time, a giant permanent laser installation was launched for the first time. It was scheduled for continuous operation in January 2012 and will set new standards worldwide. The installation connects the highest towers of the Turkmenistan capital city Ashgabat with dazzling-bright laser beams. Under one roof, LOBO bundles the experience of a leading full-range-manufacturer for display laser systems with the ingenuity of the industry's internationally most-awarded show design team. LOBO has proven its competence all around the globe with innumerable outstanding large-scale projects.

www.lvrlimited.com

Laser safety experts LVR Limited have developed several free and paid apps for Apple's iPhone and iPad, designed specifically to help users check laser emission levels in the field. LVR, known for its range of laser safety support services to venues, productions and laser providers alike, developed the apps to enable users to enter their laser parameters, specify how devices are being used and then see how the emissions relate to the safety limits. Company Principal, James Stewart, recognised as a leading expert in managing laser effects safety, has been delighted with the initial response to the apps, which notched up over 10,000 downloads in the first five months. The apps, which complement LVR's laser show safety training courses and assessment services, are available on iTunes under Laser Safety.
